Attorney General Chris Koster has issued a legal opinion on the constitutional validity of Missouri state constitutional amendment # 6, which requires mandatory photo identification for all individuals voting in Missouri. The opinion is published in the Missouri Attorney General's Office website at Koster's opinion is in response to a question presented at the judicial general election in November 2012 that sought a determination of whether the requirement to show photo identification to vote is constitutionally valid. The petition on file was submitted by the Missouri Constitution Revision Commission, which is charged with proposing amendments to the Missouri Constitution. "As you requested, I have provided an opinion of the law in response to your request for guidance," Koster said. "Ultimately, we will protect the rights of Missouri voters to the best of our ability," Koster said. "I am confident that my opinion will provide clarity on the question and will deter any further attempts to create barriers to voting."The invention relates to a vehicle brake system with an auxiliary pressure supply device and to a method for activating a vehicle brake system. A conventional hydraulic brake system for motor vehicles generally has two control circuits. A normal control circuit that is normally functional controls the brakes by means of a master cylinder and, according to one known example, the brake pedal. In the event of the interruption of the electrical power supply, an alternative control circuit is provided that is independent of the main control circuit and that is available for the brakes if the electrical power supply is interrupted. Such systems are known, for example, from ATZ (Auto Technik Zeitschrift) issue 16/15, pages 728 and 730, and from ATZ issue 16/16, pages 262 and 264. The 04aeff104c
